Day 1: Sunday 26 February 2023

Arrival in Puerto Montt.

Day 2: Monday 27 February 2023

We started from Puerto Montt to cross the Chacao Channel, where we saw a South American sea lion swimming and small pods of Peale's dolphin.

We set aside time for a walk in the afternoon once we arrived at Tepuhueico Park, which helped us to get to know the place. Then, close to sunset, we toured the section again and saw the first Southern. There were three, one female and two males, all exhibiting solitary behaviours. We also found a Colocolo opossum on the night out, which was a great find as it is an extremely rare mammal.

Day 3: Tuesday 28 February 2023

In the morning, we toured Tepuhueico Park again in search of mammals and birds. We saw Chucao tapaculo and black-throated huet-huet - iconic birds of the rainforests. In the afternoon, it rained profusely, so we had to wait at the hotel looking for birds such as green-backed firecrown, rufous-tailed plancutter, and slender-billed parakeet. In the few minutes that we left the shelter, we ended up soaked in seconds!

By evening the rain stopped, and we found Southern pudu again, sadly at first there was no evidence of Darwin's fox or kodkod, however, our luck changed at dusk where we saw the former at a distance six metres.

Day 4: Wednesday 1 March 2023

Today we headed to Puñihuil, and the weather was favourable with little wind and a small mist in the morning that dissipated by noon. We saw birds such as pink-footed shearwater and sooty shearwater, Humboldt and Magellanic penguin, red-legged cormorant, rock cormorant, imperial cormorant, neotropical cormorant, flightless steamer duck, kelp goose, and common diving-petrel. Mammals seen included blue and humpback whale, South American sea lion, Chilean dolphin, Peale's dolphin and marine otter.

Day 5: Thursday 2 March 2023

The Yaldad Fjord was windless and partly cloudy today, as we crossed it we found colonies of South American sea lion, marine otter, and a small pod of Peale's dolphin with a very young calf.

Day 6: Friday 3 March 2023

We had a totally clear morning in the Chepu River, so went in search of river otter, where we were fortunate to encounter three species - two together, a mother and calf, and an adult male in another bend in the river. They were all very trusting and we were able to spend more than half an hour with them.

Day 7: Saturday 4 March 2023

It was a windless and sunny day for the Reloncaví Sound, and we saw many South American sea lions and birds such as Chilean skua. In the afternoon at Parque Alerce Andino, we marvelled once more at the Chucao tapaculo and a quick sighting of the striped woodpecker.

Day 8: Sunday 5 March 2023

We arrived in Punta Arenas, with little wind all day and semi-clear conditions. Before crossing to the island of Tierra del Fuego, we saw the rhea and guanacos. Then we crossed the Strait of Magellan by ferry, where we saw Commerson's and Peale's dolphin, along with the South American sea lion and Magellanic penguin.

At the edge of the strait and below, we appreciated several Chilla fox, whilst in the afternoon, we admired the King Penguin Colony.

Day 9: Monday 6 March 2023

This morning was clear, and we tried to find tuco-tuco, however they only appeared in the caves. Before noon we crossed the strait by ferry back to the mainland, where windy conditions made it difficult to see dolphins; even so, in the distance, you could see well-defined groups of Commerson's and Peale's dolphin, and the occasional black-browed albatross.

At noon we looked for Humboldt's hog-nosed skunk, large hairy armadillo, and Chilla fox, and were fortunate to enjoy excellent sightings. In the afternoon, we entered Torres del Paine Park; the weather was very rainy and foggy, and as there had been constant rain for the past fortnight (something I have rarely encountered in Torres del Paine!), it made it difficult to cross the road. We arrived at our destination and had an early night.

Day 10: Tuesday 7 March 2023

Today was again rainy, and we went on the search for Culpeo fox and the Southern Andean deer in the morning and noon. We chatted to some locals, who commented that they had only seen them occasionally since the rains.

We then spent the afternoon looking for pumas as the weather had slightly improved. We had a quick encounter with a puma walking away from the trail.

Day 11: Wednesday 8 March 2023

We woke up early today and searched for pumas. We were able to find one on the side of the road, just outside the park, so stayed in the van with a very good view of a female who continued on her way after laying down to rest.

Day 12: Thursday 9 March 2023

We left Puerto Natales to fly to Santiago, where our tour concluded.
